CORRESPONDENCE

BROOKLYN, N. Y., MAY 26, 1890.

706 LAFAYETTE AVE.

From one of two letters lately received, it would seem that my frequent paragraphs upon the attainment and persecution of health have borne down a trifle heavily on the dearest of all my dear friends—the Shuts. One of them writes that some of my advice made her feel ashamed of her misadventure, very disheartened, although it was not brought on by any sin of personal omission or commission, but she is aware of. Now I confess that this communication has disturbed my peace more than anything I have read in a long time, for the simple reason that my whole heart goes out to the hopelessly shut-in, and also because I owe to them the little I have attained to in philosophy and patience. Not for my right hand, my feet and philosophy I have written these, and I cannot recall a single line

I have ever written that could do so.

No one knows better than I how many there are from which humanity has to learn that we are not self-inflicted, and surely it would be nothing less than a crime to recall past follies to those who are suffering their penalties.

My desire is to keep the danger flag flashing in a pretty stiff breeze of light, and to keep the danger flag
